A greener side of school life

The Enquirer

Thanks to a $5,000 grant from Action for Healthy Kids, using money donated by the Kellogg Co.'s Corporate Citizenship Fund, Purdy Elementary School has a new salad bar to offer healthy eating choices for students. "Their faces were just glowing," Principal Jane Haudek said of students using the salad bar. "Watching the choices they had, compared to what they'd gotten before? Phenomenal." Some of the grant money will also go to funding a walking program and the purchase of 200 pedometers.
